MHT Partners is proud to announce that PulseVeterinary Technologies, LLC (“PulseVet”), a portfolio company of Thompson Street Capital, has been acquired by Branford Castle Partners. MHT Partners served as exclusive advisor to PulseVet in this transaction.

PulseVet is a worldwide leader in regenerative veterinary medicine committed to only the highest standards in quality and innovation.

Adrian Lock, CEO of PulseVet, states, "We are excited to partner with Branford to accelerate new geographic and customer expansion and potential acquisitions. The MHT Partners team is incredibly active in the pet/vet space. That, coupled with the team's transaction expertise, drove us to a very successful end. We were very pleased to successfully partner with MHT again." Adrian is a 25-plus-year industry veteran and is supported by a strong team of tenured executive leaders.

Craig Lawson, Co-Founder and Managing Director, MHT Partners, states, "PulseVet's proprietary shock wave technology makes them the leader of the pack in regenerative vet medicine. The management team is phenomenal and has created a culture of exceptional service, caring and compassion. It was an honor working with the team again."

Patrick Krause, Director, MHT Partners, adds, "This is a global win for veterinarians and their clients. We look forward to PulseVet's continued success."
