MHT Partners is proud to announce that THMED, a portfolio company of New Capital Partners and Waveland Ventures, has been acquired by Doximity. MHT Partners served as exclusive advisor to THMED in this transaction.

THMED is a leading healthcare staffing solutions company. THMED has changed its name to Curative to reflect the new company empowered by Doximity's technology and network. Together, the two companies have created a first-ever business model for healthcare staffing that uses technology to re-engineer delivery by focusing on personalized search that connects medical groups and healthcare facilities with a far-reaching network of highly qualified vetted practitioners.

Curative will serve as the staffing vertical of the largest community of healthcare professionals in the world. In the U.S. alone, over 70% of all doctors and 45% of all nurse practitioners and physician assistants are part of the Doximity network. Combining Doximity's data science and intelligence with the service of Curative's customer-focused recruiters empowers the company to deliver even faster and more precise personalized matching of healthcare professionals with opportunities.

John Martin, former CEO and Founder of THMED and current leader of the locum tenens and permanent placement services of Curative, said, "The newly formed company truly is revolutionary for the healthcare industry. We will be able to merge innovative technology and an incredibly talented team to deliver talent to our healthcare clients like no company has ever done before." He adds, "MHT Partners guided us through a tailored and efficient process. Their knowledge of our industry and deep transaction experience delivered us a highly successful outcome. We couldn't be more pleased with our decision to hire them."

Alex Sauter, Principal of MHT Partners, states, "This new partnership allows hospitals and practices access to the largest network of physicians and other highly sought-after medical professionals in the world. This is a complete win for everyone in the healthcare industry. We're proud of our collaborative efforts and really enjoyed working with the THMED team."

Mike McGill, Co-founder and Managing Director of MHT Partners, adds, "We are honored to have worked with John and his impressive management team and we look forward to their continued success."
